*This course will be held in Washington, DC (limited space available) and also in our Laurel location using distance learning technology depending on demand.

Sixteen Sessions
Wednesdays, September 16, 2015 – April 20, 2016 (6:30 – 8:00 p.m.)
with Mavis Wylie, PhD; Wally Libel, MD; and Susan Munford, Psy.D

Selected Topics in Psychoanalysis courses will be open to psychoanalytic candidates and to individuals who have completed or are taking our psychotherapy courses or fellowship programs. Other interested mental health professionals may also apply by contacting Dr. Joy Kassett at 202-237-1793 to arrange a brief telephone interview and by providing a letter of reference from a recent supervisor or someone familiar with your current work. Credit earned by non-candidates in these introductory courses may be used towards the Psychoanalytic Training Program, if they are accepted into the program at a later date.

This course begins with an historical overview of seminal papers by Freud. Highlighting the development of psychoanalysis as both a science of the mind and a clinical method for the treatment of mental disorders, this course will immerse students in the theoretical and technical growth of the concepts and ideas that cohere as psychoanalytic thinking. The second part of the course looks at papers that have built on or challenged Freud’s thinking to later become standards in their own right.
